The confinement at a volunteer center in Nevers in 1939, where Walter Benjamin (1882 Berlin, Germany-1940 Portbou, Spain) will embark on his escape from the secret services of the Germans and the French gendarmerie towards the Franco-Spanish border, where he died mysteriously. It will serve as a pretext to show the existence of a relationship between the theories of the thinker and philosopher, Jew and Marxist, Walter Benjamin and the places he stepped on at the beginning of his escape.
