Elvis Riboldi is a nice boy with a big heart who always means well. He's energetic, optimistic, passionate and full of life! He is essentially the personification of childhood joy... but taken to the extreme. He's too energetic, too optimistic and too passionate, so things tend to get way out of control. Consequently, he often gets himself into trouble, not because he goes out looking for it, but because it finds him. And every time Elvis tries to face a problem, it snowballs out of control. This is an absurd, entertaining, character-driven comedy series that recounts the adventures of Elvis and his friends in Icaria, a place where, according to some people, nothing out of the ordinary ever happened until Elvis was born.

Milo and Yuca are two inseparable friends; they do everything together! Just like all friends, they sometimes argue about things like pizza toppings. One small detail worth mentioning is the fact that Yuca is a forest spirit: horns and fangs and all. Their other friends don't look alike either: Zabo is a male bee, Roco is a grumpy rock that comes to life and Uma is a flying head. This is because Polinopolis, where they live, was built on top of layer after layer of cemetery ruins. They've to deal with typical "first times" for their age: facing the school bully, learning to do a flip on their bikes and such. Their adventures are sometimes strange, occasionally paranormal and often absurd, but they always come with a big dose of humour.

Fantasy World is inhabited by classic fairy-tale characters. Yet time has passed and things have changed. Some residents, like the Wolf, are still alone; others have married; and a few, like Snow White, are now separated. Some have had children, others have not. The same goes for their jobs: the seven dwarfs still work in the mine, some have taken on new ventures and others have retired. Indeed, time has passed and everyone has aged. Everyone, that is, except for the Witch, who could not be any older than she already is. That doesn't mean their society has come to a halt though. They've progressed in their own way, and they can now create bizarre machines and other ingenious objects.

Three forgotten, rejected and lost objects - a toy figure, a nibbled-on cookie and a picture, plus a native dustball - live together under a sofa left behind in an attic. Their favorite pastime is explaining on the Net what they do and how they do it, like real YouTubers. Soggy, Chippy, Dusty and Laroid are all outsiders, (forgotten, abandoned, disowned, set apart and filed away), living complicated, and in no way boring existences. They are housemates; oblivion survivors who have ceased to be invisible by bringing their exciting worlds to life on the Internet.
